

Job Advert - Clinical Specialist

Allard UK is a leading manufacturer and supplier of superior quality orthotic products to both the UK and International market. We are very proud of the products that we have developed over the years and how they have made very real and positive differences to the lives of patients, by providing them with "Support For Better Life".

With a culture of continual improvement and the provision of superior technical and clinical back-up to our customers and users, Allard UK would like to recruit an Orthotic Clinical Specialist to join our small but expanding team within the UK.

As a member of the clinical team, you will provide excellent service and back-up support to both existing and new customers. The role will involve supporting the sales team in the provision of clinical/technical support, troubleshooting and training to our customers across the full Allard product range. The Clinical Specialist will also undertake clinics for the provision of our Elements Body range of Lycra garments. Finally, the role will also involve a contribution to the design and delivery of high calibre education and training courses and the provision of general assistance to other Allard UK team members and functions/departments that require orthotic support.

A competitive remuneration package is on offer and will be commensurate with the experience and capabilities that the successful candidate takes to the role.

The role reports to the Managing Director and has a strong dotted line to the Business Development Manager.

Applicants must be HCPC registered.

To apply, please email an up to date CV, to info@allarduk.co.uk, for the attention of Mr. Peter Roe.
